A few years ago, I went to Disneyland with my sister and her two children. At that time, they were probably 10 and 8.

We were walking down Main Street to go across to Downtown Disney when John, the younger of my two nephews, 29 walking. He stood there for a few seconds with his eyes looking across the street. As I started to walk towards him to tell him to 30 so we could stay with the group, he started walking across the street.

I was just standing there thinking and trying to 31 what he would do. When he got to the other side of the street, he stopped in front of a couple and their crying child. If I had to guess, this kid was probably around the same 32 as John, if not a little bit younger.

I saw them talking to each other for a moment, then John 33 his balloon that he had just got within 10 minutes to the kid. The parents looked absolutely 34. The kid took the balloon, stopped crying, smiled at John and said something to him.

Then John came walking back over to me, totally happy. The parents were still watching him as if he was a miracle(神奇的人). And the kid was smiling and talking 35 to his parents, pointing at my nephew. By the time he got back over to me, I was obviously confused. So I asked him, "What was that about?"

John answered calmly, "He looked sad. He shouldn't be sad at Disneyland, so I gave him my 36 to make him happy."

Then I asked, "You gave him your balloon?"

"Yes. His balloon might have flown away, or he didn't get one, 37 mom bought me lots of toys, so it's OK." he answered.

To me, it's hard to imagine that this kid, this 8-year-old kid, did that.

The story is definitely not as 38 as some of the other stories we have ever read, but to this day it still kind of blows me away.

A study tries to find out whether taking notes by hand helps you learn better than taking notes on a laptop. Scientists from Princeton University carried out experiments on 327 students. All students got the same lectures, but some used laptops, and others took notes by hand.

When it came to learning the concepts(概念), the handwriters won. When it came to recalling facts, the groups were almost the same, except when given time to go home and look at their notes, at which point the handwriters did better.

“Even when allowed to review notes after a week’s delay, laptop users performed worse on tests of both factual content and conceptual understanding,” the study states.

Learning suffered not because students using laptops cannot focus their mind. In the lab, scientists allowed no extra activities. Students who paid attention and took deep notes on their laptops still didn’t learn as well. In fact, the study shows the thoroughness of their notes causes the problem. Laptop users took notes word by word mindlessly, but handwriters wrote fewer words. By selecting the more important information, handwriters studied more efficiently, said researchers. The study suggests that writing is better and the hand has a “unique relationship with the brain when it comes to organizing thoughts and ideas.”

Here’s what’s a bit frightening: When the laptop students were asked to cut down the long notes, they couldn’t. The chance of persuading students to put away their laptops is probably zero. Many of them can’t write longhand(速记), a forgotten subject in many American schools.

So should we come back to traditional classrooms if we want the brightest students? Perhaps not: Another possibility, some have suggested, is apps that permit handwriting on tablets, which students might accept.

45. The study shows that _____.

- A. the laptop users do better in recalling facts
- B. the handwriters learn as well as laptop users
- C. the handwriters do better in learning concepts
- D. the laptop users are easier to tell facts from concepts

46. The word “thoroughness” (Para. 4) most probably means _____.

A. completeness B. clearness C. correctness D. tidiness

47. What can be inferred from the passage?

- A. Laptop note-taking will be used widely at school.
- B. Handwriting on tablets might appear in class.
- C. Students will learn to develop new apps.
- D. Note-taking by hand will be popular.

第二节：阅读短文，完成下列任务。（共 8 小题，12 分）

Zhang Tian graduated from university and got a teacher's certificate last year. He wanted to start a new lifestyle. He had met wonderful teachers from small villages during his early school years and he was inspired by them to go and teach where he was needed the most. For that reason he applied for and became a volunteer teacher in a village school. Bringing with him lots of books, clothes, and two pairs of trainers, Zhang Tian travelled to the village with an eager heart. He imagined all sorts of exciting things about living independently and teaching in a village.

However, not everything lived up to Zhang Tian's hopes. The school was much smaller than he had expected, with only three classrooms. In front of the classrooms, there was a playground which got dusty on windy days and muddy on rainy days. Living in the village was also more challenging than he had thought. The power and water supplies were unstable, so he could only shower every three or four days, and he had to learn how to cook. The thought of leaving once flashed through his mind, but he quickly gave up on the idea and found ways to deal with the challenges.

The school had just three teachers and Zhang Tian was the only English teacher. The other two local teachers were responsible for maths and Chinese. To make school life healthier and livelier for his students, Zhang Tian introduced more subjects to the school—music, art and PE. It is not surprising that PE is the kids' favorite subject! Their school lives are now more attractive and interesting, and they enjoy playing football in the playground, as well as singing songs they've learnt.

Zhang Tian's first year is almost over. It has been a tough year, but he has enjoyed working with the children. What made him feel satisfied was that his students were able to read, speak and write in English, and they became more confident in learning. The village is like his second home now. Although he had only intended to stay for one year, he now feels ready to stay for another year. He feels so happy that he followed his heart when choosing what to do with his life, even though it may not be what others expected of him.

I'm excited to tell you that I've joined a Chinese painting club in our school this term. Members of our club meet once a week. We have different activities and I enjoy all of them. We've invited some well-known painters to the club to talk about the history of Chinese painting, and to teach us the basic techniques of drawing. At the weekend, we go to visit art galleries, where we study the masterpieces of famous artists and discuss how we understand them. Of course, we practice painting whenever we can spare some time.

I'm so proud of myself that now I understand Chinese painting a lot better, and I've learned how to draw. I love Chinese painting.

Best regards,
