I stopped to watch my little girl busy playing in her room. In one hand was a plastic phone; in the other a toy broom. I listened as she was speaking to her make-believe(假想的) little friend and I'll never forget the words she said, even though it was 31.

She said, "Jane's in the corner because she's not been very 32. She didn't listen to a word I said or do the things she should." In the corner I saw her baby doll all dressed in lace and pink. It was clear she'd been put to sit 33 and think.

My daughter continued her "34", as I sat down on the floor. She said, "I'm all 35 up. I just don't know what to do with her any more. She cries whenever I have to work and wants to play 36, too. She never lets me do the things that I just have to do. She tries to help me with the dishes, but her arms just cannot 37. And she doesn't know how to fold towels. I don't have the 38 to teach. I have a lot of work to do and a big house to keep clean. I don't have the time to sit and play — Do you see what I 39?"

And that day I thought a lot about making some 40 in my life, as I listened to her words that cut me like a knife. I hadn't been paying enough 41 to what I hold most 42 dear. I'd been caught up in responsibilities that increased over the years.

But now my 42 has changed, because, in my heart, I realize that I've seen the world in a different light 43 my little darling's eyes. So, let the cobwebs(蜘蛛网) 44 the corners and the dust rabbit rule the floor. I'm not going to worry about keeping up with them any more.

I'm going to fill the house with 45 of a child and her mother, for we are granted only one childhood, and we will never get another.

On a Friday night, a poor young artist stood at the gate of the New York railway station, playing his violin. The music was so great that many people stopped to put some money into the hat of the young man.

The next day, the young artist came to the same place, and put his hat on the ground gracefully. Different from the day before, he took out a large piece of paper and laid it under his hat. Then he began to play the violin. It sounded more pleasant than ever.

Soon he was surrounded with people who were attracted by the words on that paper. It said, "Last night, a gentleman named George Sang put an important thing into my hat by mistake. Please come to claim(认领) it soon."

After about half an hour, a middle-aged man rushed through the crowd to the violinist and said, "Yes, it's you. I knew that you were an honest man and would certainly come here." The young violinist asked calmly, "Are you Mr. George Sang?" The man nodded. The violinist asked, "Did you lose something?" "It's a lottery ticket(彩票)," said the man. The violinist took out a lottery ticket on which George Sang's name was seen. "Is it?" he asked. George nodded and took the lottery ticket and kissed it, then danced with the violinist.

The violinist was a student at an arts college and had planned to attend advanced studies in Vienna. Later his classmate asked the violinist, "At that time you needed money to pay the tuition(学费) and you had to play the violin in the railway station every day to make money. Why didn't you keep the lottery ticket for yourself?" The violinist said, "Although I don't have much money, I live happily. But if I lose honesty I won't be happy forever."

Through our lives, we can gain a lot and lose so much. But being honest should always be with us.

One advantage of the Internet is shopping conveniently online for clothes; one disadvantage of the Internet is also shopping conveniently online for clothes.

"Nothing fits," said Lam Yuk Wong, a senior in electrical and computer engineering at Rice University. "Everyone says this. They order clothes and they don't fit. People get very unhappy."

Wong and her design partner, Xuaner "Cecilia" Zhang, are Team White Mirror, creators of what they call a "virtual (虚拟) fitting room". Their goal is simple and consumer-friendly: to let online clothing shoppers have a perfect fit and a perfect look when shopping every time. Both women are from China, Wong from Hong Kong and Zhang from Beijing. They both order most of their clothing online. They got the idea from their own experience as consumers and from listening to the complaints of friends and relatives. "They say, 'The color is wrong' or 'I got the right size but it still does not fit.' We want to make it like you're in the store trying on the clothes," Zhang said.

Using a Kinect developed by Microsoft for use with its Xbox 360 video game player, Zhang scans Wong and turns her image into, in effect, a virtual model, keeping Wong's dimensions (尺寸), and even her skin and hair color. "We put the clothes on the shopper's 3-D body models and show how they look when they are dressed," Wong said. So far, Wong and Zhang have adapted the software to show dresses and shirts, and they are now working on shorts.

Asked if she thought men as well as women might be interested in using their virtual fitting room, Wong said, "I think their wives will care about this, so it will also be important to men."

49. Why is shopping conveniently online for clothes a disadvantage?

- A. Clothes bought online may not fit.
- B. Students may easily get addicted to it.
- C. It attracts more online clothing shoppers.
- D. It causes shoppers to waste too much money.

50. Wong and Zhang got the idea to design a virtual fitting room from _____.

- A. the Xbox 360 video game player
- B. a program at their university
- C. some shop-owners' complaints
- D. their shopping experiences

51. Which of the following shows the process of using the virtual fitting room?

- A. scanning—trying on clothes—getting images
- B. trying on clothes—getting models—scanning
- C. scanning—getting models—trying on clothes
- D. trying on clothes—getting images—scanning

52. What did Wong think of her virtual fitting room?

- A. It is perfectly developed.
- B. It will have its market share.
- C. It is limited to women shoppers.
- D. It is like a kind of video game player.

Reader: For six years, I' ve run an office that has two employees: me and my boss. He used to be so appreciative that I didn' t mind doing a little extra, but about two months ago, he started being rude and demanding. Now he even yells when I don' t have time to bring his favorite wine to his home after work.

This change started when we met a wealthy new customer, who is a huge jerk (古怪的人) — my boss' s new behavior is just like his.

My boss is a good man; he and his family have treated me like a little sister. Is there a good way to discuss this with him?

Karla: Sounds like your new customer has set a bad example to your boss. You need to remind your boss that you' re in his corner— but you' re not his slave. My suggestions are as follows.

Start with a simple question in a calm moment: “Is everything okay?”

State the truth: “Until recently, I' ve felt like a valued teammate. But our relationship has become tense. Your expectations of me seem to have changed. Although I used to do occasional personal businesses for you as a favor, now it seems expected.”

Draw your lines: “If you think my job description needs to change or my performance is not good enough, let' s discuss that. Otherwise, I need you to stop yelling at me and to respect my personal time.”

Ideally, you' ll get an apology and a promise to do better. After that, it' s a matter of reinforcement (加强) . If he starts yelling, look at him with a calm expression. After he cools down, restate his request and add, “Is that correct?” For the unreasonable request, such as fetching his favorite wine after work: “I' m afraid I can' t take care of that for you.” If he keeps acting like a jerk, there are bosses out there who will better respect your time and talent.

Karla L. Miller is ready to hear your work dramas.

Nearly 19 percent of teachers of color(有色人种教师) left their jobs after the 2014-2015 school year. Some left for personal reasons like taking care of their families. But 50 percent said they left because they were dissatisfied with their employment situation, such as poor working conditions, student discipline problems and large class sizes. Thus, taking immediate measures to improve it is our top priority.

For years, researchers have proved the benefits of increasing the share of minority teachers in schools, especially as our public school system has turned to one that is made up mostly of minority students. Teachers of color, who are more likely than their white counterparts to choose to work in racially diverse(多种多样的) schools, offer particular benefits to their students. Graduation rates increase among minority students when they are taught by racially similar educators, research shows. They can also serve as positive role models, and their presence reduces the chance of racial discrimination at school.

The Shanker Institute report suggests that the rate of minority teacher hiring is not the whole problem. The problem is what happens after these teachers enter the classroom. These teachers often work in high-poverty rural schools. They are more likely to have less-desirable working conditions.

Diversity is a key component to equality and opportunity. Where there's a diverse teaching workforce, all kids thrive. So solutions must be found at once to turn this trend around. Firstly, schools should develop mentorship programs that support minority teachers once they are in the classroom. Secondly, more money should be spent in improving working conditions in these schools. Of course, school headmasters should also be evaluated on their ability to retain teachers of color.

57. Among teachers of color leaving their jobs, half of them quit because _____.

- A. they had to move to other places
- B. they had to take care of their children
- C. they eventually found better-paid jobs
- D. their employment situation was unsatisfactory

58. Which of the following is the main idea of the second paragraph?

- A. The benefits of increasing the share of minority teachers in schools.

- B. The reasons for teachers of color leaving their jobs in many schools.
C. The ways to decrease the possibility of racial discrimination at school.
D. The solutions to increasing graduation rates among minority students.
59. Which of the following components is vital to equality and opportunity?
A. Honesty                  B. Variety                  C. Ability                  D. Safety
60. How did the author feel when writing the passage?
A. He felt angry about the government.
B. He felt it urgent to solve the problem.
C. He was satisfied with the present situation.
D. He didn't care about diverse teaching workforce.

第二节（共5小题；每小题1分，共5分）

根据短文内容，从短文后的七个选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

Humor plays an important role in relationships. In new relationships, humor can be an effective tool not just for attracting the other person but also for overcoming any awkwardness or embarrassment. 61

Sharing the pleasure of humor creates a sense of connection between two people. When you laugh with one another, you create a positive tie between you. This tie acts as a strong buffer(缓冲) against stress, disagreements, disappointments, and bad patches in a relationship. And laughter really is infectious. 62 But don't worry if you're not naturally a lighthearted, humorous person—you can learn to access your playful side and develop your sense of fun.

Like any tool, humor can be used in negative as well as positive ways. Humor can only help you overcome relationship problems when both partners can understand the joke. 63

If your partner or friend isn't likely to appreciate the joke, don't say or do it. Humor in relationships should be equally fun and enjoyable for both people.

Don't use humor to cover up other emotions. 64 That's when it is used as a cover for avoiding, rather than coping with, painful emotions. You can be funny about the truth, but covering up the truth isn't funny. When you use humor and playfulness as a cover for other emotions, you create confusion and mistrust in your relationships.

65 The important thing is to find enjoyable activities that help you embrace your playful nature with other people. As humor and play become an inseparable part of your life, you'll begin to find daily opportunities for using your new-found skills to help build and maintain your relationships.

- A. Humor can help you and your loved one.
B. There are times when humor is not healthy.
C. It's important to be sensitive to the other person.
D. It's never too late to develop your humorous side.
E. The more you joke, play, and laugh—the easier it becomes.
F. Just hearing someone laugh can make you smile and join in on the fun.
G. In longer-term relationships, humor can keep things exciting and fresh.

Dear Mr. Zhang,

My name is Li Hua, a student in Hongxing Senior High School. Knowing that Beijing Marathon will be held in 2019 on the official website of Beijing Marathon Organizing Committee, I am so excited that I can't wait to be a volunteer.

As a sports-lover myself, I have a general idea of the rules of different marathons. In addition, I am also good at communicating with others and eager to lend a hand to people in need. With the spirit of voluntary work rooted in my heart, I have been a volunteer in many activities and I am sure that I can be a suitable volunteer you need. If I am honored enough to be accepted as a volunteer, I will serve the runners heart and soul, using my patience and carefulness to make them feel at home.

Look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely,
