Explore the History of Jazz and Celebrate the Lunar New Year

Here is a sampling of some events for this week and how to tune in. Note that events are likely to change after publication.

■ Monday

Explore the history of jazz in Washington with the musician, broadcaster and historian Ken Avis, as he discusses what made the city a capital and how the music has changed through the years. This event, presented by the Smithsonian Associates, costs $25 for members and $30 for nonmembers. Registration closes two hours before the event.

When: 6:45 p.m.

Where: smithsonianassociates.org/ticketing

■ Tuesday

Celebrate the Lunar New Year's unique food traditions in a talk from the Freer Gallery of Art and Arthur M. Sackler Gallery. Jan Stuart, the Melvin R. Seiden organizer of Chinese art, will present works from the museum's collection, and Lydia Chang of the Peter Chang restaurant empire, will share stories about her family's celebratory dishes. This event is free, and attendance is capped at 500.

When: 6 p.m.

Where: asia.si.edu/lunar-new-year-celebration

■ Wednesday

Join Ensemble NYC for an evening of love songs. Featuring well-known artists, the event will include pieces like Gioachino Rossini's "Una voce poco fa" and Mozart's "La ci darem la mano". A part of the money will be donated to West Side Campaign Against Hunger. Tickets are need-based and can be purchased for as little as $10.

When: 7:30 p.m.

Where: musae.me/ensemblenyc/experiences

■ Thursday

Dance with your little ones while listening to a special Valentine's Day concert from the Laurie Berkner Band. In a live performance, Ms. Berkner, a children's recording artist, will play family-friendly songs, dance with animations and even introduce special guests. Tickets are $20, and give viewers access to both the 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. shows.

When I was seven, my family and I were coming back from a T-ball game. In our driveway, we spotted two adult geese and a small gosling. The adults were frightened by our return and flew away, but their baby was still too young to fly and couldn't follow.

Hours passed, and night fell. The tiny little thing was wandering around our yard, unaware of what could happen, and it was clear that the gosling needed protection, warmth and food to make it to the morning. At that point, we had to bring him into our backyard.

We all pretty much slept with one eye open for several days. Each morning, we would try to rush the goose over to his parents, who kept coming back to our yard. He wouldn't go to them, though, and they wouldn't come close enough to claim him. The young goose had clearly decided we were his new family, and my twin sister Joanna called the little guy Peeper.

Almost a year passed and we settled into a routine filled with feathery hugs and company. One evening, my uncle came over, and my dad threw Peeper up into the air to show he could fly around the house, but this time, Peeper just flew off. Everyone was very sad. Twenty years passed, and Peeper became a fond memory for my family.

Hu Min, English education expert and founder of the New Channel, said the combination of traditional culture and English teaching has become a trend, guiding young people to bring their own wisdom and deep cultural heritage to tell Chinese stories to the world. D

It's time for bed, the lights are out, and yet you're wide awake. You do eventually manage to fall asleep, but even then, it's a very shallow, restless sort of sleep.

Now more research suggests you needn't look further than outside your window and at the moon for the cause of this sleeplessness. However, in a surprising twist the findings weren't entirely what the researchers expected. While we know that humans are a species ruled by light, the "lunar phase effect" (月相效应) affects sleep even when artificial sources of light are accounted for.

Rather than people staying up later and sleeping less during the full moon, it was just before the full moon that sleep was shorter and lighter. "It turns out that the nights before the full moon are the ones that have most of the moonlight during the first half of the night," said Horacio Iglesia, a professor of biology at the University of Washington in The Guardian. The opposite was true just before the new moon — people tended to sleep more and go to bed earlier.

Ninety-eight participants across three Indigenous communities in Argentina wore wrist monitors tracking sleep patterns over the course of one to two months. While one community had no access to electricity, the second community had limited access, and the third community was located in an urban setting with full access to electricity.

The study also found that this lunar phase effect on sleep also appeared to have greater impact on people who had more limited access to electricity. In every community, participants' peak (高峰) sleepless period occurred in the three to five days leading up to the full moon night, while the opposite was true for the new moon, the study authors found.

Wanting further insight, the researchers compared their data to the results of a similar study of 464 Seattle-based students at the University of Washington. The findings proved consistent.

This research supports the view that try as we may, we can't ever fully get away from some forces of nature.

12. What makes it hard for people to fall asleep?

A. Visual distance.

B. Faded light.

C. Artificial light.

D. Bright moonlight.

13. When do people usually have a light sleep?

A. Before the full moon.

B. During the full moon.

C. Before the new moon.

D. During the new moon.

14. What did the research in Argentina find?

A. The third community slept least during the new moon.

B. Lunar phase effect affected the first community more.

C. Peak sleepless period often happened at the same night.

D. The result of the research differed from previous ones.

15. Which can be a suitable title for the text?

A. Shallow Sleep Does Harm to Health

B. The Moon Affects Our Sleep Cycles

C. People Live in Harmony with Nature

D. Sleep Patterns Differ from Each Other

At present, the take-out industry has become a popular consumption pattern. Apart from 41 (buy) food from take-out stores, consumers can order food in multiple time and spaces 42 the help of network. While we tend to think of take-out food as having originated in the modern era (时代) as a result of our “too busy to prepare my own meal” lifestyle, the 43 (true) is quite the opposite.

The concept of take-out food can be traced back to both ancient Greece and ancient Rome. In the ancient Greco-Roman world, eating at home was highly 44 (usual) for poor people. Because they could not afford a private kitchen in their house to cook 45 (they), they had to buy 46 (prepare) food from market and roadside stalls. Thus, 47 was called “thermopolium” came into being. The word thermopolium literally meant “a place where something hot 48 (sell) at that time”. It was either an ancient form of a take-out restaurant 49 an outdoor service counter that offered ready-to-eat food.

Over the years, archaeologists have 50 (constant) discovered a number of thermopolia in Pompeii and Herculaneum, two towns that were destroyed (and preserved) by the eruption of Mount Vesuvius. In one thermopolium, the remains of cloth bags containing around thousand coins were discovered, certainly showing the popularity of the establishment.

October 12th was big day for my team and me. We take part in a basketball tournament for senior students in Lancaster County. Some players were absent because he had to take exams. What's worse, there was no substitute. The team what we played against was last year's top one. As a striker, I played hardly. Later, I had little energy than before and got injured because of I fell down. During the pause, the coach told us to "play with effort but wisdom". Then, I saved my strength and looked for good chances to scoring more goals. Finally, I scored another four point and was named the "most valuable player".

Dear Peter,

An after-school activity “Labor Experience Sharing” is to be held this Friday afternoon. It's my pleasure to invite you to join us.

As scheduled, the activity begins at 4 p.m. in our classroom. Aiming to enrich the students' school life and develop the good habit of labor, our class will share the stories and feelings of labor experiences during the past vacation. Through the activity, not only can we promote communication among classmates, but also we can raise our awareness of labor. If you take part in the activity, you'll enjoy the friendly atmosphere of our class.

We'd be delighted to look forward to your participation.

Yours,
Li Hua
