In many poor countries, children receive a low standard of education. Classrooms have few supplies, teaching materials, and books. One non-profit organization is trying to change that. The organization, founded in 2005, is called the One Laptop (笔记本电脑) per Child (OLPC). Its goal is to provide the world's children with cheap, but powerful notebook computers.

The computer is special in that it is a children's notebook. Its keyboard is small, and the machine is strong enough against being dropped. The notebook also has a webcam (a video camera) for taking pictures and recording videos. There's also built-in Wi-Fi to make it easy to connect to the Internet.

In the classroom, the notebook has many functions. It can be used to take notes and do homework. Plus, students can draw pictures and create reports. It is also an e-book reader, and comes with many books pre-installed (安装). In fact, one of its goals is to replace books in schools with limited resources.

The notebook went into production in November 2007. Teachers in places like Peru and Nigeria are already reporting a difference. They say children are more excited about learning. Young scholars are also making new friends in other countries over the Internet. Children are even using the notebooks to teach their parents at home.

Many experts see technology as a way for the world's poor to improve their lives. The OLPC's aim is to bring the "light of learning" into children's lives. Indeed, with tools like the notebooks in their hands, children are given a sense of hope for a brighter future.

42. What does the OLPC provide for the poor students?

A. Money.

B. Books.

C. Teachers.

D. Computers.

D. Its keyboard is big.

44. What is Paragraph 3 mainly about?

- B. Why the e-book reader is so popular.
- C. How the notebooks are used in class.
- D. What resources are needed at school.

第二节：阅读短文，完成下列任务。（共 8 小题，12 分）

D

It's September, a new start for every student. "Teens Magazine" has invited two students to write about their daily life in senior secondary school.

Joe, I'm a ... digital native!

The online world is a big part of my life. I'm a "digital native"—I've been using the computer since I was a kid.

I do a wide range of things online. Besides doing all my school work, I chat with my friends, watch films and read the daily news and other interesting articles; I also shop for various things online, such as books, computer hardware and other necessities. It's so convenient to be able to compare the quality and prices from different online shops before I buy. I also play computer games from time to time and I even play tennis on my television screen in my living room!

My parents are worried that I may become an "Internet addict". They think I'm playing computer games all the time and I chat too much with online friends. According to them, there is a danger that I may not be able to tell whether these friends are real friends. My mum keeps telling me to go out with my school friends instead. Maybe she's right.

It's important to meet friends in person from time to time, not just on social media. Actually, I do know I need to drag myself away from the online world sometimes, especially because real life can be just as interesting.

Li Ying, I'm a ... go-getter!

Senior secondary school is a new start. Studying is definitely a big part of my life. I tend to set a goal for every subject at the beginning of the term. My aim is to do well in every subject this term. Science is my favourite subject, and my biggest target is to prepare myself for my degree in science in university. I am always attentive in all classes and think actively, so that I can have more free time to do other things that I'm interested in after school.

I like reading books of all kinds. I have a top 10 reading list and I try to keep it updated. Meanwhile, I'm an active member of my school's long-distance running team and volunteering club. It always makes me excited to work hard and achieve a team goal together.

To achieve all I want to, I must use my time well. At school, I do my homework when I have spare time. After school, I try to use any possible time to revise the things I have learnt during the day. For example, it usually takes me 20 minutes to get home by bus. I often use the time to review English words. As the popular saying goes, every minute counts!
