第二部分 阅读理解 (共两节, 满分 50 分)

第一节 (共 15 小题; 每小题 2.5 分, 满分 37.5 分)

阅读下列短文, 从每题所给的 A、B、C、D 四个选项中选出最佳选项。

A

Most of us fall back on the classics when it comes time to buy Mother's Day gifts: flowers, fancy tea or a card. But if you really want to show off this year, you might want to dig a little deeper. This helpful list of Mother's Day gifts will be of help.

LifeStraw Personal Water Filter (过滤器) $ 20 (now 15% off)

If she's been hitting the trail without one, Mom will surely appreciate having a LifeStraw in her bag, especially on longer hikes. The lightweight filter can remove dirty and harmful substances from any water source, making it a necessity for outdoor adventures.

Organic Dandy Instant Herbal Drink $ 13

This herbal dandelion-root mixture helped Strategist senior writer Liza Corsillo cut coffee out of her diet completely. "The taste is surprisingly similar to coffee, but without the bitterness that would often mess with my stomach," she says.

Alessi Apostrophe Orange Peeler $ 40 (now 20% off)

"Every so often, a device enters your life and leaves you wondering how you managed beforehand," says Strategist contributor Fanny Singer of this Italian orange peeler. "This teardrop-shaped device is designed to make it really easy to slice an orange to separate the peel from the fruit. It's a pleasant surprise every time I use it."

WuFuYuan Tapioca Pearls, Black Sugar Flavor $ 5

According to one Strategist staffer who has been drinking bubble tea (珍珠奶茶) since she was in elementary school, these pearls are the best for making bubble tea at home. "The pearls by themselves aren't sweet, but you can put them in a brown-sugar mixture to get the desired sweetness," she explains. "Or just add sugar to your milk tea."

21. What is the present price of LifeStraw Personal Water Filter?

- A. $ 20. B. $ 17. C. $ 15. D. $ 3.

22. Which can be a useful tool for making fruit salads?

- A. WuFuYuan Tapioca Pearls.
B. LifeStraw Personal Water Filter.
C. Alessi Apostrophe Orange Peeler.
D. Organic Dandy Instant Herbal Drink.

23. What do Organic Dandy Instant Herbal Drink and WuFuYuan Tapioca Pearls have in common?

- A. They taste sweet. B. They can treat diseases.
C. They are related to drinks. D. They are a must for hiking trips.

B

A couple of years ago I graduated from art school. After graduation I was unsure of what to do with my degree. I had majored in illustration (插画专业) and loved it, but didn't really feel interested in doing illustrations for any companies. This left me with few options other than freelance (自由职业的) jobs and taking care of kids for others.

I spent two years working as a baby-sitter, doing freelance illustrations on the side. It just wasn't quite enough to pay rent, but I loved it, so I worked well over 50 hours a week, trying to keep up with both.

Just under a year ago I went to a friend's wedding. I couldn't think of a gift for them and really didn't have a lot of money to spare, so I used my talents to create a portrait (肖像) for them. It wasn't much, but I hoped it would be a good gift. When I handed the portrait to them and they unwrapped it, the looks on their faces were something I did not expect. There were joyful tears in their eyes as they cried, "That's us! This is so beautiful!"

It's funny because when I was in art school portraits were always my least favourite assignment. I hated drawing people and was always so much more interested in drawing little furry creatures. Once I saw the looks on my friends' faces after giving them their portrait, it was all over. I suddenly loved portraits and wanted to do more.

I now take portraits to every wedding I go to and have given them as gifts to the families I baby-sit for. Every time the reaction makes all of the hard work and time I put into them so worth it. I've just started offering couple, family and pet portraits as an item on my Etsy shop.

24. What did the author choose to do after graduation?

- A. She worked for a long-term employer.
- B. She married and looked after her baby.
- C. She pursued further studies in her major.
- D. She worked as an illustrator as a side job.

25. Why did the author decide to draw a portrait for her friends as a wedding present?

- A. She was eager to show off her talent.
- B. She couldn't afford an expensive gift.
- C. Her friends didn't take wedding photos.
- D. She wanted to satisfy her friends' request.

26. How did the friends feel when they received their portrait?

- A. Embarrassed.
- B. Motivated.
- C. Overjoyed.
- D. Depressed.

27. What can be known about the author from the last paragraph?

- A. She earned more money to support her talent.
- B. She has begun to create her career as an illustrator.
- C. She turned to illustrations for pets other than humans.
- D. She no longer needs to go to the families she baby-sat for.

C

The heavy use of fossil fuels over the last 150 years has released massive amounts of greenhouse gases, which has caused the Earth to warm up. Scientists say large amounts of CO_2 must be removed from the atmosphere and stored. Plants and trees do this naturally. But there's so much CO_2 in the atmosphere that just planting trees and protecting forests won't solve the problem. And, when these plants and trees die, the carbon they've stored gets released again. That means humans need to come up with ways of removing carbon from the air and storing it. This is called Direct Air Capture(捕获)(DAC).

A company called Heirloom has just opened the first DAC plant in the United States. Heirloom's process uses limestone(石灰石) to capture CO_2 . The company heats up the limestone to separate out the CO_2 , which is then locked away in concrete. Heirloom uses renewable electricity to produce the heat, so the process doesn't produce more CO_2 . The process is extremely expensive though. The new plant can remove 1,000 tons of CO_2 a year. That's a tiny amount compared to how much carbon needs to be removed from the atmosphere.

Graphyte is another US company working on DAC. The company collects unwanted plants. It dries this "biomass" completely so that it can't break down. Graphyte then strikes the dried plants into small bricks which are trapped in a special wrapper and buried deep underground. Graphyte says its process doesn't use much energy and can work anywhere. The company claims the cost is merely less than $100 to capture a ton of CO_2 .

Not everyone is excited about carbon removal. Some people worry that it will take too long to make a difference. Others worry that focusing on removing carbon could take attention away from more important climate actions, like switching from fossil fuels to renewable energy. But experts say the decision isn't to do one or the other. The world needs to end fossil fuel use and pull carbon out of the air.

28. What can be the impact of the death of plants according to Paragraph 1?

- A. Their leaves take in more carbon.
- B. There is an increase of carbon in the air.
- C. It leads to the death of animals dependent on them.
- D. The carbon they absorb disappears with their death.

29. What is Direct Air Capture?

- A. A course studying the atmosphere.
- B. An association dealing with climate change.
- C. A new method beneficial for the environment.
- D. A newly developed material for a greener world.

30. In which way does Graphyte outweigh Heirloom?

- A. Its operation procedures are simpler.
- B. It achieves its goal at a lower expense.
- C. Its products are intended for construction.
- D. It works with the aid of renewable energy.

31. What do experts mean in the last paragraph?

- A. It's necessary to work along both lines.
- B. Carbon removal is a win-win solution.
- C. Environmental issues are about to be resolved.
- D. Advantages always coexist with disadvantages.

D

If you're ever lost in the woods or wilderness, learning some expert skills could keep you alive until rescue comes. Here is what you need to know to start a fire.

So much depends on a good fire, and not just for warmth. The flames keep dangerous animals away and make the meat safe to eat. The smoke from burning lots of green leaves and pine branches can also help you get rescued.

You often need fire most when conditions are the worst. If you haven't tried rubbing sticks together in a non-survival situation—the friction fire method using a bow drill—chances are good that you're going to burn precious calories to try but still end up cold.

If you have to pick one way to make fire, you need several critical stuff. "Ferro rods(钕铁棒)" are small metal rods that produce a shower of sparks as hot as 3,000 °F / 1,650 °C when struck with a striker or the back of a knife. The rods are perdurable, which can stand thousands of strikes and can get wet and still work. You'll also need "dry tinder(火绒)", such as a bunch of dead grasses, or enough very fine wood shavings from branches. Place the tinder on a flat rock. Cotton balls mixed with petrol are ideal since they'll catch quickly and burn for several minutes. Then gather up wood in a range of sizes for your fire.

To direct the sparks into your tinder, instead of holding the rod still and striking it with a striker or your knife, put the rod against the rock and into your tinder and hold the striker still as you pull the rod away. When you need a lot of sparks, hold the rod firmly against the rock in your tinder and rub the striker back and forth to generate sparks. Once you have a flame, add your larger tree branches in a tent shape, gradually adding bigger pieces of wood until you have an established fire.

32. What is true when it comes to being unable to try the friction fire method beforehand?

- A. You will miss the chance to get enough heat.
- B. You are sure to encounter the most deadly condition.
- C. You are pretty likely to fail to start a fire finally despite efforts.
- D. You will easily lose your physical strength due to the cold weather.

33. What does the underlined word “perdurable” mean in Paragraph 4?
A. Time-consuming. B. Hard-wearing. C. Eye-catching. D. Easy-changing.
34. What needs to be done to get abundant sparks?
A. Holding the rod still in the air and striking it.
B. Rubbing against the rod again and again with tinder.
C. Placing the rod on the tinder and striking the tinder nonstop.
D. Pushing and pulling a striker repeatedly on the rod placed in the tinder.
35. What is the suitable title for the text?
A. Build a Fire in the Wild
B. Survive in Tough Conditions
C. Defend Yourself Against Fire
D. Strike the Iron While It is Hot

第二节 (共 5 小题; 每小题 2.5 分, 满分 12.5 分)

阅读下面短文, 从短文后的选项中选出可以填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

People-pleasing behavior can lead to mental and physical health problems such as fear of rejection, anger, headaches or high blood pressure. It can result in weak boundaries, problems with decision-making, low self-worth, dependency, and low competence. 36. You can achieve it by consistently integrating the following strategies in life.

- Practice being alone.

Learn to love your own company. Trust that people will not abandon you, even if you don't drop everything for them. 37. That means that people will still be there for you even if you have not searched for ways to do something to please them. Practice this by going to a movie or restaurant alone.

- Make a decision by yourself.

Map out your options without gathering input from others or overthinking. Remind yourself that you don't have to please everyone with your decisions, just yourself. 38. If someone else has an opinion, it's their responsibility to state it, not your responsibility to mind read.

- 39.

If you're a people-pleaser, you may find it hard to decline because you feel it comes across as cruel or uncaring. But it absolutely does not have to. Confident and mindful communication is more honest and can be done in a firm yet respectful way. Try statements like: “I would really love to be able to help you, but unfortunately, I'm already committed to something else.”

- Turn to internal appreciation.

Remind yourself about your positive qualities instead of waiting for others to notice. Reflect on your day and give yourself positive feedback or do something nice for yourself. People-pleasers look to the outside world for approval. 40.

- A. Practice saying “no”
- B. Turn that around and praise yourself
- C. It's not your duty to make everyone else happy
- D. Improve your self-confidence and life satisfaction
- E. Believe you are lovable for who you are, not what you do
- F. Always remember you're a person who anticipates other people's needs
- G. It's vital to recognize and overcome your own people-pleasing behaviors

第二节 续写 (满分 25 分)

阅读下面材料, 根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段, 使之构成一篇完整的短文。

Honesty and integrity are Mandy's habits, and she always follows the Golden Rule: "Do not do to others what you don't want others to do to you." But when she recalled her past conduct, her face burned with shame. When many selfish and unfriendly small things came back to her memory, a shy expression appeared on her face. She resolved to follow the Golden Rule.

On a Saturday evening, when Mandy went to Mr. Moore's inn as usual to collect the money for her mother's laundry for him, totaling one hundred pounds, she found that Mr. Moore was obviously very angry with some horse dealers who he had been bargaining with. He held an open money bag in his hand, filled with notes, and hardly noticed Mandy's request for the money. He yelled at her because she disturbed him while he was busy. He casually handed some money to Mandy.

Mandy was glad to get rid of the chaos and quickly went out. She stopped and safely put the money in her wallet, only to find that he had given her two hundred pounds instead of one hundred pounds. She looked around. No one approached, and her first feeling was the joy of winning an unexpected award.

"This is all mine," she said to herself. "I will use it to buy a new coat for my mother. I wonder if I can also buy a pair of shoes for my brother Tom."

At that moment, she remembered that Mr. Moore must have given it to her by mistake. But the greedy voice whispered, "He gave it to you. How do you know he hasn't intended to give it as a gift? Keep it! He will never know because he has too many such notes in that big money bag."

注意:

1. 续写词数应为 150 个左右;
2. 请按如下格式在答题卡的相应位置作答。

This conflict between doing good and bad things was going on in her mind.

"Sir, you paid me two hundred pounds instead of one," she handed him the extra money.
